

So Long to Wait

There is a woods in Pennsylvania,
and once when I was full of care
I took my sorrows out among the trees
And I met my true love there.

And my true love came to me like the morning breeze
And my true love came to me like the song of the birds
And I woke up the way that flowers do
To sweet and old familiar words.

And my love said: I leapt the stars on my way to you
I scattered the clouds and blued the skies.
I coaxed the sun to come and warm your face
When I saw the tears in your eyes.

And I said: Don't you know it's been a long, long time?
And my pain is very great?
So why'd it take so long for you to arrive?
And my love said: Why did it take you so long to wait?

And my love said: For I've been waiting since the dawning of time
Waiting with each step you took your way
Waiting for the moment you would catch me eye
And the moment you would stay.

There is a woods in Pennsylvania, and if your heart is full of care
You can take your sorrows out among the trees
And you will meet my true love there.

And my love will come to you like the morning breeze
And if your pain is very great, and you are longing for a moment's peace
My love will teach you how to wait.
